Relationship of Police to Criminal Justice System

What is the sequence of events in the criminal justice system?

Note: This chart gives a simplified view of caseload through the criminal justice system. Procedures vary among jurisdictions. The weights of the lines are not intended to show actual size of caseloads.

2-400 POLICE DISCRETION

Police officers, of necessity, exercise professional discretion in deciding whether or not to arrest citizens for violations of the law. Other specific laws, department policies, or orders of a supervisor may further limit officers' discretion and direct whether or not to effect an arrest.

In general, police officers, using sound professional judgment, may take the following factors into consideration when deciding whether or not to arrest a citizen:

1. The seriousness and nature of the offense (generally, the more serious the offense, the more likely arrest is the preferred course of action);
2. The potential that arrest will effectively aid in the resolution of a conflict;
3. The availability of legal alternatives to arrest that would adequately resolve the conflict or problem;
4. The likelihood that the citizen will be deterred from future violations by warning and education;
5. The officer's belief that the citizen made an honest mistake in violation of the law;
6. The victim-witness's interest in prosecution;
7. The likelihood of formal prosecution of the offense;
8. The potential that arrest will create more serious breaches of the peace or other problems (e.g., inciting riot);
9. Legitimate competing priorities for police resources.
10. The officer's belief that the arrest will protect members of the community and/or the citizen.

The following factors are among those that are improper for a police officer to consider in deciding whether or not to make an arrest:

1. The citizen's economic status, race, ethnicity, gender, or other status for which the law prohibits legal discrimination;
2. The revenue likely to be generated by fines or penalties imposed upon conviction;
3. The personal or professional relationship that the citizen has with the police officer or with other influential citizens;
4. The personal advantage to the officer for processing or avoiding processing of the arrest (e.g. overtime compensation, desire to finish tour of duty, avoidance of paperwork, etc.).

Problem-Oriented Policing A Wisconsin Idea

Problem-Oriented Policing

Improving Policing: A Problem-Oriented Approach

Herman Goldstein

The police have been particularly susceptible to the "means over ends" syndrome, placing more emphasis in their improvement efforts on organization and operating methods than on the substantive outcome of their work. This condition has been fed by the professional movement within the police field, with its concentration on the staffing, management, and organization of police agencies. More and more persons are questioning the widely held assumption that improvements in the internal management of police departments will enable the police to deal more effectively with the problems they are called upon to handle. If the police are to realize a greater return on the investment made in improving their operations, and if they are to mature as a profession, they must concern themselves more directly with the end product of their efforts.

Meeting this need requires that the police develop a more systematic process for examining and addressing the problems that the public expects them to handle. It requires identifying these problems in more precise terms, researching each problem, documenting the nature of the current police response, assessing its adequacy and the adequacy of existing authority and resources, engaging in a broad exploration of alternatives to present responses, weighing the merits of these alternatives, and choosing from among them.

Improvements in staffing, organization, and management remain important, but they should be achieved—and may, in fact, be more achievable—within the context of a more direct concern with the outcome of policing.

Complaints from passengers wishing to use the Bagnall to Greenfields bus service that "the drivers were speeding past queues of up to 30 people with a smile and a wave of a hand" have been met by a statement pointing out that "it is impossible for the drivers to keep their timetable if they have to stop for passengers."¹

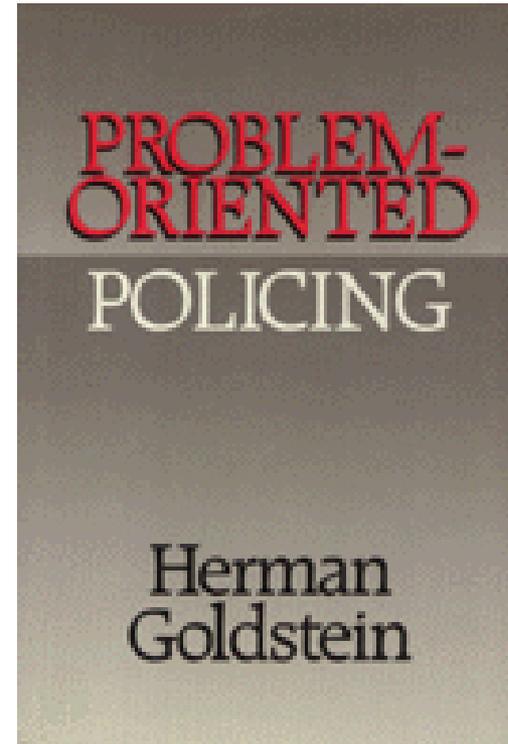

All bureaucracies risk becoming so preoccupied with running their organizations and getting so involved in their methods of operating that they lose sight

What Is Problem-Oriented Policing?

PROBLEM-ORIENTED POLICING (POP) is an approach to policing in which (1) DISCRETE PIECES OF POLICE BUSINESS (each consisting of a cluster of similar incidents, whether crimes or acts of disorder, that the police are expected to handle) are subject to (2) MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION (drawing on the especially honed skills of crime analysts and the accumulated experience of operating field personnel) in hopes that what is freshly learned about each problem will lead to discovering a (3) NEW AND MORE EFFECTIVE STRATEGY for dealing with it. POP places a high value on new responses that are (4) PREVENTIVE in nature, that are (5) NOT DEPENDENT ON THE USE OF THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM, and that (6) ENGAGE OTHER PUBLIC AGENCIES, THE COMMUNITY AND THE PRIVATE SECTOR when their involvement has the potential for significantly contributing to the reduction of the problem. POP carries a commitment to (7) IMPLEMENTING THE NEW STRATEGY, (8) RIGOROUSLY EVALUATING ITS EFFECTIVENESS, and, subsequently, (9) REPORTING THE RESULTS in ways that will benefit other police agencies and that will ultimately contribute to (10) BUILDING A BODY OF KNOWLEDGE that supports the further professionalization of the police.
